Leonhard, whose husband works in the brewery, says that Sohn has been circulating scandalous stories about her for a month or more. She did not believe it at first, but when the stories were repeated to her with evidence she could not doubt that Sohn had invented and spread them, she resolved to take the matter of stopping the circulation of the stories into her own hands, and to do it in her own way. She bought a horsewhip on Friday evening, and went from her home at No. 137 Columbia street, to the brewery, where she called Sohn into the yard and proceeded to give him the lesson she thought he deserved.

Sohn, when seen at his home yesterday, denied that he had ever told any stories concerning the woman. Mrs. Leonhard has liven in Union Hill all her life and she is known throughout North Hudson as a woman of spotiess reputation.
